

Project Title: Connecting Dots: Exploring Shared Film Heritage

Implemented by: DokuFest and Beldocs

Supported by: The “Culture and Creativity for the Western Balkans” (CC4WBs) project

Terms of Reference (ToR) for Researchers

BACKGROUND

About the programme

The “Culture and Creativity for the Western Balkans” (CC4WBs) project, funded by the European Union, is focused on fostering dialogue in the Western Balkans by enhancing the cultural and creative sectors for increased socio-economic impact. Over a 48-month period, the CC4WBs project aims to improve the performance of the cultural and creative sectors in order to enhance skills, knowledge, access to financial aid to increase competitiveness and sustain co-production and circulation of goods and services in the Western Balkans.

Project Background

DokuFest and Beldocs are embarking on a strategic partnership to conduct a comprehensive analysis of the Yugoslav film heritage. This initiative aims to document the historical development of cinema in the Yugoslav countries.

Project Objective

The project aims to benefit various groups in Kosovo and Serbia, including researcher-artists, filmmakers, festival attendees, university students, artists, researchers, and academics. It achieves this through a residency program that allows researcher-artists to explore film history and health education, resulting in various artistic outputs. These products are exhibited at festivals, expanding the audience to university students, artists, and academics, promoting interdisciplinary collaboration. The project also enriches film archives, preserving the cultural heritage of Kosovo cinema, and fosters meaningful exchange among professionals, strengthening the film industry, academia, and the arts. Overall, the project establishes a foundation for long-term benefits, promoting research, artistic creation, knowledge dissemination, and cultural preservation in the region.
